FOR TEXAS SOLAR & ROOFING PROS · SEPTEMBER 2026

Jobber, or something else?

You asked if QuoteIQ would be better than Jobber. I looked at that, and at three other options. Here's what I found.

---

01 — THE SHORT VERSION

What I found

Your software isn't the problem. The shared login is.

Your crew all sign in with one Jobber account. That saves money, but it breaks things. And I think it's why they say the app doesn't work.

Here are the three things that matter.

- The shared login is probably breaking the app. Your crew says Jobber's app is unusable. But Jobber's app is one of the best rated on the market. What they describe — getting kicked offline, clock-ins that don't save — is what happens when seven phones share one account.
- QuoteIQ can't talk to your website. Your site files invoices into Jobber by itself. QuoteIQ can't accept that. Someone would have to type them in by hand again.
- Zoho is worth a look. You already use Zoho for contacts, quotes and files. Zoho's field service tool charges by job, not by person — so everyone gets their own login for free. But its app is rated poorly, which is a problem when your crew already won't use one.

WHAT I'D DO

Buy your crew their own logins. Wait 30 days. Then decide.

Six more Jobber seats cost about $174 a month. That tells you if the app is really the problem. It also gets your records straight and puts you back inside Jobber's rules.

If the complaints stop, you're done. If they don't, look at JobNimbus — not QuoteIQ.

02 — START HERE

The shared login costs more than it saves

You share one login to avoid paying $29 a month per person. That saves you about $348 a year. Here's what it costs you.

- You can't tell who did what. Every quote and every price change has the same name on it.
- Time tracking is useless. So is GPS. Both work off the person signed in.
- Passwords never change. When someone quits, all seven of you would have to switch. It rarely happens.
- It breaks Jobber's rules. Their terms say accounts are for one person and must not be shared. They could shut the account down.

And it explains the app complaints

Here's what Jobber users complain about in public reviews:

- "I keep going offline" — has to close and reopen the app several times a day.
- The app "will tell you it's clocked you in when it has not."
- "Schedules are not updating live… critical notes are missed."

All three are the same kind of problem. One account signed in on seven phones means each phone keeps kicking the others out. That looks exactly like a broken app.

THE MAIN FINDING

Your crew is right that it doesn't work. They may be wrong about why.

I can't prove this from outside your account. But it fits, and it's cheap to check.
And if I'm wrong, you still end up with proper records and working time tracking.
You don't lose either way.

---

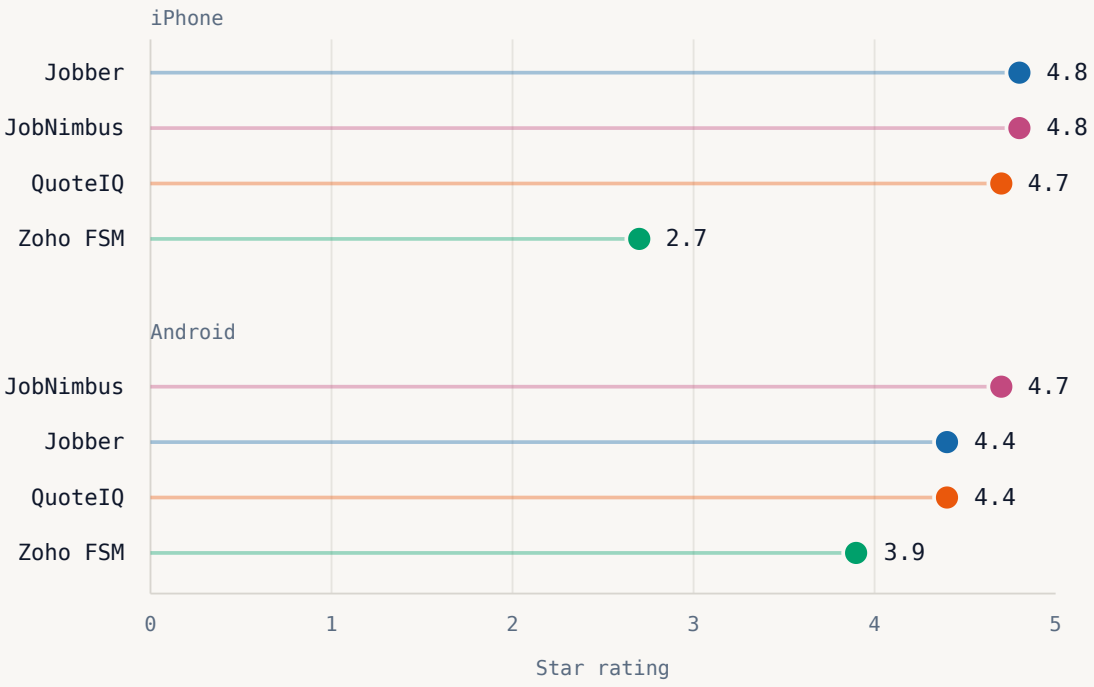

03 — THE PHONE APPS

Which app would your crew actually use?

This matters most for you, because your crew already refuses one. So I pulled the public ratings.

CHART 1 — PHONE APPS

Star ratings, out of 5

Jobber's app is not badly rated — it ties for best on iPhone, from 21,000 ratings. Zoho's 2.7 comes from only 11 ratings, so treat it carefully, but the written reviews say the same thing: too many taps, looks dated, wouldn't open on a new iPhone.

So the app your crew rejects is one of the two best on the market. That's a strong sign the problem is your setup, not the software.

If the 30-day test fails, JobNimbus is the one with a clearly better app. It beats Jobber on Android and is built for roofers.

04 — COST

What each one costs

They charge in three different ways:

- Per person — Jobber and JobNimbus. This is what pushed you into sharing logins.
- Per group of seats — QuoteIQ. Adding people is free until you outgrow your plan.

- Per job — Zoho. Up to 200 people, at no extra charge.

At seven people the gap between them is small. QuoteIQ's plans jump from 4 seats to 10, so you'd pay for 10 either way.

CHART 2 — COST

Roughly what a year costs for 7 people

At seven people, QuoteIQ is only $286 a year cheaper than Jobber Connect — and that's before card fees. Zoho's price is for 60 jobs a month and will go up with your volume, so treat it as a starting point rather than a quote. JobNimbus is my estimate from their published rates. Jobber is their base price plus $29 a month per extra person.

Watch the card fees

Every one of these takes a cut when a customer pays by card. That cut is bigger than the software bill.

TABLE 1 — CARD FEES

Option	Card rate	On $500k of card payments
Jobber	2.9% + 30¢	$14,500
QuoteIQ	3.9% + 30¢	$19,500
Zoho / JobNimbus	Depends who you connect	Varies

QuoteIQ charges 1% more than Jobber. On $500,000 of card payments that's $5,000 a year. The software only saves you $286. So QuoteIQ ends up costing you roughly $4,700 a year more, not less.

Jobber also charges just 1% for bank transfers instead of 2.9% for cards. On roofing-sized invoices that's worth real money. Worth pushing customers that way whatever you decide.

One thing to keep in mind: all these prices assume everyone has their own login. You're paying about $348 a year right now. Doing this properly costs more no matter which one you pick.

05 — ZOHO

You're already using Zoho

I found this in your website's code. You're not really a Jobber company. You're a Zoho company that also uses Jobber.

TABLE 2 — ZOHO YOU ALREADY RUN

Zoho tool	What it does for you
Zoho CRM	Holds your contacts. Your quote screen searches them as you type.
Zoho Sheet	Every quote and Christmas invoice lands in a spreadsheet on its own.
Zoho WorkDrive	Stores documents, one folder per client.
Zoho sign-in	Your team signs into the admin site with Zoho. They already have accounts.

Zoho's field service tool would fix your biggest problem. It charges by job, not by person — up to 200 people at no extra cost. Everyone gets their own login for free. It also has a proper two-way connection your website could use, and it syncs with the Zoho CRM you already have.

THE CATCH

Zoho's phone app is the worst of the bunch — and a phone app is your problem.

Moving a crew that already won't use one app onto a worse one is a bad bet, however good the price is.

My suggestion: don't rule it out, don't sign anything. Zoho has a free plan for up to 20 users. Put two people on it for two weeks and see what they say about the app. That costs nothing.

---

06 — CONNECTIONS

Can your website still talk to it?

Your website files invoices and customers into Jobber by itself. That works because Jobber has a two-way door — your site can put things in and take things out. Not all of these do.

CHART 3 — CONNECTIONS COMPARED

	Jobber	Zoho	JobNimbus	QuoteIQ
Your site can put data in	YES	YES	PAID TIER	NO
Which plan you need	Any plan	Any plan, free included	$550/mo plan	$299/mo plan
Written instructions for developers	FULL	FULL	Yes	ONE PAGE
Add your own fields	Connect plan up	Standard plan up	Yes	FORMS ONLY

That top row is why QuoteIQ keeps losing here. A cheap price doesn't help if the system can't take the data your website already makes.

Jobber isn't perfect either. Your team already hit a real limit: once an invoice is created, Jobber won't let the website change its line items, and it can't record deposits. That's noted in your own code.

07 — SWITCHING

What switching would take

You've already paid for software that talks to Jobber — about 840 lines of code across 11 files. Here's where it would land.

TABLE 3 — WHERE THE WORK GOES

Job to do	Move to Zoho	Move to QuoteIQ
Sign in to the new system	ALREADY BUILT	CAN'T
Send invoices over automatically	REBUILD	CAN'T
Get notified when things change	REBUILD	PARTLY
Booking forms on your website	REBUILD	REBUILD
Move your old records over	FINE	FINE
Rough time	75–120 hours	45–75 hours

QuoteIQ looks like the quicker move, but only because there's less to move to. You'd end up with less than you have now, and someone typing invoices again every week.

These hours are estimates for planning, not a quote.

08 — SCORECARD

How much you can shape each one

This is about bending the software to fit your business. Scored 0 to 5 on what each company publishes. Higher is better.

CHART 4 — SCORECARD

Scored out of 5 in five areas

	Jobber	Zoho	JobNimbus	QuoteIQ
Things it plugs into	5	4	4	2
Track your own info	4	4	4	2
Works while you sleep	4	4	4	4
Talks to your website	5	4	3	1
Getting your data back out	3	4	3	3
Total out of 25	21	20	18	12

Jobber and Zoho end up close, by different routes. QuoteIQ's low score is about how little it lets others build alongside it — not about how good its own features are.

09 — WHAT TO DO

In order

1. Buy six more Jobber logins. Change the shared password.
   About $174 a month, so all seven of you have your own. Run it 30 days. This is the only urgent step.

2. Find two numbers while you wait.
   Last year's card payment total, and your average jobs per month. The first settles the QuoteIQ question. The second is the only way to price Zoho.

3. Put two people on Zoho's free plan.
   Costs nothing. Tells you if the app is really as weak as its rating.

4. Ask the crew again at day 30.
   If the complaints stopped, you're done. Move up to Connect or Grow and get on with it.

5. If they didn't stop, book a JobNimbus demo.
   Best app of the five, built for roofers. Ask about the $550/mo plan and your real total.

I'd check QuoteIQ again in a year. If they build a proper two-way connection, this changes in their favour. The product is well liked and the pricing is honest. It just can't do the one thing your setup needs.

---

10 — LOOSE ENDS

What I couldn't check

None of this changes my advice, but sort it out before you sign anything.

1. Your jobs per month. Zoho charges by job. Without your real number, its price on the chart is a floor and nothing more.

2. QuoteIQ's extra 1%. This came from a reviewer quoting their terms, not from QuoteIQ. It's the most important number in the cost section. Ask them directly.
3. Jobber's limits per plan. Their pricing page and their help pages disagree about how many people each plan allows. Check with your rep.
4. Zoho's app score. Eleven ratings is almost nothing. The written reviews back it up, but that's why I'm suggesting a trial rather than a decision.
5. JobNimbus's real price. My $9,960 assumes one admin, one office person and five in the field. If your seven split differently, so does the price. Get a written quote.

Where this came from

- Jobber: pricing · plan details · developer docs · terms of service
- Zoho: FSM pricing · FSM developer docs · FSM and CRM together
- QuoteIQ: pricing · connection help page · independent pricing review
- Others: JobNimbus pricing · Housecall Pro pricing
- App ratings, September 2026: Jobber · QuoteIQ · Zoho FSM · JobNimbus
- Your own website code, September 2026

Note: some top search results for "Jobber pricing" are written by QuoteIQ. None of my numbers come from those. Prices checked September 2026 and can change. This covers software cost and capability — it isn't legal or financial advice.